

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

INDIANAPOLIS, SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 16, 1894—SIXTEEN PAGES.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

MONARCH GROCERY CO.
(INCORPORATED.)
84 East Washington St.
TELEPHONE 1453.

This is the season when we are all looking for good things to eat. When these good things can be had at low prices what a nice combination it makes. The Monarch is the only place where fine goods and low prices are combined.

1,000 Turkeys already secured. Give us your order early for your Christmas Turkey.

New Edam Cheese, each	85c
New Shelled Almonds, per lb.	25c
New Mixed Nuts, per lb.	10c
New Layer Figs, per lb.	14c
New Layer Raisins, per lb.	10c
New Cal. L. M. Raisins, per lb.	5c
New Cal. seedless Raisins, per lb.	3c
Citron, per lb.	15c
All kinds California evaporated fruits cheap.

Monarch brand whole Strawberry Preserves, in glass

18c

Extracted white clover Honey, absolutely pure, per lb.

11c

Put up in Mason jars, each

25c

New York old-fashioned

Wheat Flour, per lb.

4c

Self-rising Buckwheat flour, 2-lb. pk.

10c

Antacid Baking Powder, 5-lb. pk.

10c

Pancake Flour, 5-lb. pk.

10c

Oat and Wheat Flakes, 2-lb. pk.

10c

Pure Maple Syrup, per gal.

75c

White Sugar Syrup, per gal.

45c

Amber Table Syrup, per gal.

35c

Clark's celebrated Catsup, per bottle

15c

Queen Olives, per quart

30c

Fancy Sweet Pickles, per quart

20c

15-pound pail Jelly

45c

California Apples, per 3-lb. can

 14c || California Egg Plums, 3-lb. can | 14c |
California Cherries, 3-lb. can	15c
Yellow Table Peaches, 3-lb. can	15c
Pie Peaches, 3-lb. can	10c
Good Sweet Corn, 2-lb. can	5c
Finest Sweet Corn, 2-lb. can	5c

Early June Peas, good, 2-lb. can

10c

Marrowfat Peas, fancy, 2-lb. can

10c

Solid packed Tomatoes, 3-lb. can

10c

Our own dressed Poultry. You get just what you want.

Chickens, per lb.

10c

Turkeys, per lb.

12c

Ducks, per lb.

8c

Geese, per lb.

8c

Fresh Oysters, per quart

25c

Fresh Eggs, per dozen

35c

Finest Michigan Potatoes

8c

Sugar-cured Cal. Ham, per lb.

7c

Pure Lard, per lb.

4c

Best Lard, per lb.

4c

Fresh Crackers, all kinds, per lb.

10c

Good Roller Process Flour, per brl.

$2.50

Finest Patent Flour, per brl.

$2.50

Great bargains in Tea and Coffee.

Coffee, 1-lb. pk.

15c

Only one price for all the Turkey's weight and get $15 in profit. This is your chance. Don't miss it or you will miss it.

A Good Thing At a Mighty Good Time

A Holiday Take-Your-Pick Distribution

THE WHEN'S SWEEPING SALE

$15

All our Men's Cheviot, Vicuna, Fancy Worsted, Casimere, Thibet and Whipcord Suits, worth $20, $22, $24, $28 and $30—your choice for $15. Latest styles. Best makes. Out-and-out bargains.

$12

All our Men's Suits, same materials as above, but slightly lower grade. Were made to sell for $15, $16, $17 and $18. All go now at $12.

$10

All our Men's Suits that were made to sell at $12, $13 and $14 will be sold for $10.

$7

All $9, $10 and $11 Suits will go now for $7. Every suit a good, serviceable one.

THIS GREAT HAND-EM-OUT SALE began yesterday. There were lots of lucky people. This sale will be on all week. There will not be as many great big bargains the last of the week as there are now.

CAN YOU TAKE A HINT?

THE WHEN

Beginning Tuesday evening the When will be open every evening until Christmas.

THE HAZELTON PIANOS

Have shown themselves so far superior to all others in beauty of tone, elasticity of touch, exquisite workmanship and great durability that they are earnestly sought for by all persons desiring the VERY BEST PIANO. Over one thousand of these celebrated Pianos have been sold in Indianapolis and vicinity.

Ex-President Harrison Says:

MR. GEO. C. PEARSON: Dear Sir—I am no musician myself, but my wife and daughter are, who regard the Hazelton Piano as in every respect satisfactory, and say that they could not desire a better instrument.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

The Hon. John C. New Says:

MR. GEO. C. PEARSON: Dear Sir—It affords me great pleasure to say that the Hazelton Bros. Piano purchased some nine years ago has given perfect satisfaction in every respect. We have had instruments of other celebrated makes in our house, but none of them proved so satisfactory as the one now in use.

JNO. C. NEW.

Fred Fahley, of Fahley & McCrea, Says:

MR. GEO. C. PEARSON: Dear Sir—We made selection of our Hazelton Bros. Upright Piano from among the Steinway, Hazelton and Knabe Pianos. In the comparison the Hazelton showed itself so far superior to others in tone, touch, finish and workmanship that we purchased the Hazelton, and twelve years of use has fully convinced us that the Hazelton Pianos stand unrivaled. Yours very respectfully, FRED FAHLEY.

MR. GEO. C. PEARSON: Dear Sir—We thought that we were purchasing the "best piano" when we

In addition to our large assortment of Hazelton Pianos we carry a large stock of the well-known Kraken Bros. Pianos, Blais & Sons Pianos, Krell Pianos and Sterling Pianos; also, Packard & Sterling Organs, which we are offering at SPECIAL LOW PRICES AND ON VERY EASY TERMS.

PEARSON'S MUSIC HOUSE

Nos. 32 and 34 North Pennsylvania Street, Indianapolis, Ind.

ANDREW BOWEN DEAD

NEVER RECOVERED CONSCIOUSNESS
AFTER LAVIGNE'S LAST BLOW.

Died Yesterday Morning at His Home in New Orleans, Despite All Efforts to Save the Pugilist's Life.

LAVIGNE HELD FOR MURDER

BUT LATER RELEASED UNDER A TEN-THOUSAND-DOLLAR BOND.

Nine Others Charged with Being Accessories and Also Admitted to Ball-Views of Leading Pugilists.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 15.—Pugilist Andy Bowen is dead from the effects of a blow on the jaw, administered last night, by George Lavigne. He died this morning at 7:15 o'clock while Father Delaney was praying over his inanimate form. He never regained consciousness from the time the blow landed on his face. Early this morning he was conveyed from his dressing room at the Auditorium Club to his home on Thalia street, near Magazine. The scene at the house this morning was a most pathetic one. Dr. E. D. Martin was called in at an early hour and did all that human skill and medical science could do, but it was of no avail. His eyes had looked on the floor for the last time and he never opened his lips.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning, faithful watchers stood by the dying pugilist's side, hoping that his eyes would give some sign of intelligence. Medical advice was given, but it was of no avail. His eyes had looked on the floor for the last time and he never opened his lips.

The doctors remained with Bowen to the end and his wife stood by his bedside. Just as the hands of the clock were creeping around to 7, Mrs. Bowen fainted over him and her ears were strained to catch the word. Andy shivered and groaned, his frame shook and then, without ever having come back to consciousness after Lavigne had landed the blow on the jaw, he breathed his last. A doctor was called, but a handkerchief was tied about his face, and a message was sent to the police station over the nearest telephone notifying that office of the death of the pugilist. The police station, in turn, quickly sent word to the coroner. Bowen's body was on its back when the reporter saw it this morning. The lips were swollen and there was a tinge of purple about them, and his rather large face seemed somewhat larger than usual, although there was no strong sign of pain on it. The features were natural, the mouth was open, and the hair was dark. The news of Bowen's death was made known to Lavigne and his party shortly after it had been communicated by telephone to the central station. Lavigne had been detained at the station with his second and attendants all night and he had slept but little, being anxious every moment to get the news from the bedside of the wounded pugilist. Lavigne was shocked when he heard the news of Bowen's death and expressed his sympathy for Bowen's family. In answer to a question as to whether he did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's family. He said he was sure that Bowen did not feel that he had been the direct cause of the death of the pugilist; or, in other words, that the blow which he had delivered on Bowen's jaw had been sufficiently forceful to have carried with it fatal consequences. He said he believed that Bowen fell his head back struck the pine flooring and that the concussion had been the immediate cause of his death. Lavigne was not only sorry for the immediate death, but he was in much apprehension as to how the blow would be received by Bowen's